MANAGEMENT COMMENTARY

Following a strong stock market rally in the first quarter of 2019, the backdrop in May took a more volatile turn as the ongoing US-China trade war discussions escalated, and the US Federal Reserve restated its more dovish stance towards policy changes. The Fund further demonstrated its low correlation to wider equity market cycles, posting a -0.36% return, outperforming the FTSE All Share which, in the same period, returned a loss of 2.62%. The defensive nature of the portfolio, combined with the prospect of lower interest rates for longer, reinforces the attractiveness of infrastructure and renewables as a source of uncorrelated income.

Having made some changes to the portfolio during April, including the addition of Greencoat Renewables Plc ("GRP"), May was a stable month in terms of underlying allocations and portfolio composition. There was however some softening in sentiment towards the UK infrastructure sector, driven by a rise in the perceived risk of an energy nationalisation programme under a Labour government, principally relating to PFI/PPP contracts and utilities. The release of Labour's policy paper 'Bringing Energy Home' outlining their plans impacted the share price of those listed funds with high exposure to core UK infrastructure assets. Within the portfolio, this included INPP and HICL, whose share prices were down 6% and 2% respectively. Notwithstanding this, we believe that the likelihood of any government taking wholesale steps to renationalise assets in a way that would significantly reduce value for the companies in the Fund's portfolio is low. We continue to have confidence in both the underlying projects and assets held by HICL and INPP and see current pricing as attractive to the Fund.

It is pleasing to report that May was another strong month for fund inflows, supporting NAV growth of £40.5m. At month end, the Fund's NAV totalled £246.7m.
